

ARTINFO

The 7 Top Shows to See This Week, From Lisa Yuskavage to Carsten Nicolai

Courtesy Frederico Sève Gallery
Emilio Sanchez's work at Frederico Sève Gallery. From left: "Mediterranean Street Alley", "Untitled (New York on a Sunny Day)", "Untitled (Mediterranean Buildings)"

By ARTINFO

Published: September 21, 2011

UPTOWN

Emilio Sanchez at Frederico Seve gallery, 37 West 57th Street, 4th Floor, September 21-October 29, fredericosevegallery.com

This show presents a collection of architectural paintings drawn from the artist's life and travels, including his time in New York City. Sanchez's elegant canvases pare the city's urban space down into an economy of line

MIDTOWN

Affordable Art Fair NYC, 7 West 34th Street, September 22-25, Opening times vary, affordableartfair.us

The fall edition of New York's Affordable Art Fair kicks off this week, with four days straight of art you might actually be able to buy. Tickets are normally $17 (affordable?), but Nespresso is sponsoring free admission on Thursday, September 22 from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m.

CHELSEA

Ronald Ventura's "A Thousand Islands" at Tyler Rollins gallery, 529 West 20th Street, through October 22, trfineart.com

Tyler Rollins gallery is presenting Filipino artist Ronald Ventura's second solo exhibition in the United States. "A Thousand Islands" features a new series of paintings that mingle the visual vocabulary of photorealism with graffiti, street art, and tattoo, depicting a motif of floating islands. The works on view show tiny, self-enclosed worlds.

Nicholas Krushenick at Gary Snyder gallery, 529 West 20th Street, Opening September 22, garysnyderart.com

To inaugurate their new Chelsea space, Gary Snyder gallery is showing an exhibition spanning the career of Nicholas Krushenick, a forerunner of Pop art whose brilliantly colored, crisply edged abstractions bring to mind comic books and cartoons.